

WORKER FALLS OFF CHAIR

On Thursday April 30th, a worker was sitting in a chair while waiting for training to begin. At some point this worker put their feet on the table which put themselves at risk of the chair going over backwards.

Even though all of the swivel chairs in this facility are 5-legged which makes them more resistant to tipping over, this worker went over backwards and put a hole through the drywall.

It was lucky that only the wall was damaged!

ACTION ITEMS:

- 1) Signs will be placed in each of the training rooms
- 2) All staff members will ask workers to stop putting their feet on the desk if they see this at-risk behaviour
- 3) This incident will be shared with the Safety Partnership community.
